

Points for Discussion

Point 1. What are the failures, which lead to decent work deficits in global supply chains?

In their interventions, participants are invited to consider the following:

- Recent trends, opportunities and new challenges in the evolution of global supply chains, and their implications for achieving decent work.

Point 2. What are the salient challenges of governance to achieving decent work in global supply chains?

In their interventions, participants are invited to consider the following:

- Strengths and weaknesses of current efforts by governments, social partners and business to achieve decent work in global supply chains.
- The scope of international labour standards to address the salient challenges of governance to achieving decent work in global supply chains.

Point 3. What guidance, programmes, measures, initiatives or standards are needed to promote decent work and/or facilitate reducing decent work deficits in global supply chains?

In their interventions, participants are invited to consider the following:

- Options to ensure that ILO guidance, programmes, measures and initiatives achieve decent work in global supply chains.
- Options to ensure that ILO standards are fit for purpose to achieve decent work in global supply chains, and if not, options to address this.
